MUCH FOOT BALL LOOKED FOR ON LOCAL FIELDS THIS SEASON

More Colleges Represented Than Usual and Many More Than the Average Number of Games Are Scheduled.

Four colleges within the city limits of Washington and one right on its outskirts will be represented by foot ball teams this fall. Never before have there been so many institutions here with gridiron squads ready to begin practice within a few days. Georgeown, Catholic University, Gallaudet, George Washington and the Maryland State College are to play through strenuous schedules. Besides these, the Naval Academy, and so many Washingtonians attend the contests there and so many others are diectiy or indirectly interested that it also can almost be classed as a local with so many teams in the field, it is only natural that an unusual number of games are listed. With the exception of the annual combat between Georgetown and Virginia, which has not been played since 1913, the foot ball public in the District has never had such an attractive outlook. Hardly a week is to go by without games, and sometimes three or four are to be played.

gridiron season is to open Seper 23, the Maryland State Colbeing scheduled to appear in a contest before any of the others, he mentioned date the Baltimore real contest before any of the others. On the mentioned date the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute will be at College Park in what should not prove an overly difficult combat for the home team. September 30 will find Catholic Iniversity opening its season at Brookland, Eastern College being listed as its opponent. After that there will be contests every week, some of which should develop real foot ball treats.

Best Games of the Year.

The principal games of the year on local fields will be between Georgetown and George Washington, Catholic University and Maryland State, Georgetown and North Carolina Agricultural and Mechanical College, Catholic University and Muhlenberg, Maryland State and Virginia Military Institute. The resumption of relationship between Georgetown and George Washington is arousing considerable interest, and if the latter develops a team capable of putting up a real fight against the Hillitoppers something of the old-time enthusiasm with which these battles were greeted in bygone years is likely to be evidenced. The game between Maryland State and Catholic University is rapidly becoming of even more than local concern, and last season one of the best struggles of the years was fought to be more important generally than it has been since its inauguration as the main event of the Blue and Gray schedule.

Mahlum, captain of the eleven, undoubte ily will be back at his regular line position, guard, while Cusack and O'Connor also look good enough to hold their places at left end and right tackle against all comers. It is for the other places on the line that the real battles will develop.

Catholic University loses both its tackles, Kerr and Killion; Fullback Bill Butler, Left End McCue and possibly both guards, Lee, who was at left guard, has finished his work, and it is understood that Costakls, right guard, is not intending to return to college. From last year's eleven the Brooklanders have back Right End McKinney, Center Murphy, Quarterback Shortley, Halfback Rogers and Halfback Jack Butler. There was question about Kerr returning to college, owing to deficiencies in scholastic work. Killion will be back, but has played his four years. There were splendid substitutes for some of the positions last season, and it is said that new material of exceptional capabilities is to enter.

NEW YORK, September 9 .- August Belmont's Stromboli and Andrew Miler's Roamer were to have met in a spe cial feature at a mile and a half at Belmont Park today, but they did not. August Belmont, president of the Jockey cancellation of today's feature. Mr. Belmont called off this race on the advice of his trainer, Sam Hildreth. Hildreth contended that the track was too slow for either a race or a trial. He explained that Stromboli was a hard gelding to train—a high strung gelding—and if worked today over a heavy track would have had his strength and speed sapped so much that Roamer might have walked me in a match with him Monday.

The allbi of the Belmont stable wa mocked into a cocked hat by the result This was won by the great English colt Star Hawk, who stepped the mile and one-half within two-fifths of a second of the track record. After his gallant effort in the Latonia classic Star Hawk raced rather poorly until this meeting. He started once before in the present meeting and won handliy from a classy field. Today the English colt was figured to trail both Spur and Crimper. Phillips sent him to the front immediately and kept him there all the way.
